The 21st Century requires global perspectives with ability to work consistently with people from diverse backgrounds. International education is an effective way to acquire skills that are essential if one wants to be a part of global terms. Universities in every corner of the globe welcome Indian students as they add a different perspective to a class.

In a new trend, students are opting for unconventional programmes like fashion styling, film-making, script-writing, music production, adventure sports, production design, environmental sciences, sustainable energy, and culinary arts among others. Netherlands, for instance, is offering several courses in water management. France offers an array of luxury brand management programmes. Universities in Germany are making waves with their research initiatives in modern transport engineering. Sports and allied fields are niches areas in Australia. Marine engineering and marine sciences are an offer at coastal universities of Florida, California and Hawaii etc. Also, several universities are using technology to conduct online courses.

Questions: 1) What is essential for one to be a part of global term?

2) In what way are Indian students distinct?

3) Describe the new trend in one sentence.

4) What kind of courses is being offered by several leading universities of Europe?

5) What do coastal American universities specialise in?
